February 27, 2022 – Making the most of being stuck in Chincoteague, VA
Day 82 of our trip.- Sunday

Sunday is a day at rest. We all slept in.

Much of our day consisted of typing and proofreading February 22 – today. I also moved some of my photos and documents over to our Microsoft Onedrive. The wifi here is great so I was able to sync files.

As I bring my day to a close Haleigh mentions the amazing sky out our window. She is making homemade meatballs with spaghetti and garlic bread. Haleigh wrote up a grocery store list today and will go out tomorrow to get some shopping done. The store is only one block away from where we are.

Mark helped me write today and relaxed while watching his YouTube channels.

I took a break and walked around town for a bit. It is a sleepy Sunday here in the downtown area however there are a lot of people out and about walking the waterfront and playing in the park. It is nice to hear the laughter of the kids.

Two fishing boats came in and unloaded their catch. It would appear that both boats were catching sand sharks. Cannot be certain about that though we are a distance away from that dock. But Mark is pretty certain.

We had a great pre-dinner conversation about what Haleigh's plans are for our return and some of her long-term goals.

It is a wonderful life. Happy and blessed.

Thank you all for your support. The homeward journey has had its challenges but thankfully Mark is cool, calm, collected, and very capable of persevering over them. We are so thankful for the wonderful people here in Chincoteague that have been watching over us and helping us while we are held up on our trip.
